UNITY IN DIVERSITY:

The Way Ahead for Humanity

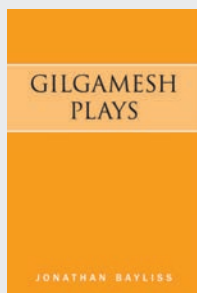

by Benjamin Creme

Concerns the future of all people – and of the Earth itself. Humanity, says Creme, is at a crossroads and must make a major decision: to create a new civilization where social justice reigns, or continue as we are, divided and competing, and cause the end of life on planet Earth. Creme shows that the path forward is realizing our essential unity without sacrificing our equally essential diversity.

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A REPORTERby Edward A. Harris

Raised in Missouri, Harris (1911 – 1976) won a Pulitzer Prize in 1946 when he worked for the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. He came to know Harry S. Truman in Missouri, and on being assigned by the Post-Dispatch to Washington, he interviewed Truman when he was a Senator and Vice-President. When Truman became President, Harris was confrontational at press conferences, but the two men held private discussions in the White House about ancient history, a passionate advocacy of the President. Harris was an assertive but also canny reporter. His autobiography illuminates fifty years of journalism in Missouri and Washington.

THE IMPROBABLE COMMUNITYCamp Woodland and the American Democratic Ideal*by Bill Horne

In 1939, a group of idealists inspired by the spirit of New Deal reform put their vision of American democracy into practice by creating Camp Woodland, a racially and ethnically inclusive summer camp for urban kids located in upstate New York. By design Woodland sought to have its diverse population of campers and staff become part of the rural community in which they lived. It earned the acceptance of its neighbors through a program of preserving the community's folk music, attracting musicians like Pete Seeger to its programs.

<http://www.improbablecommunity.com/>RISING WINDA Novel of The Civil War Battle of New Market*by Virginia Moore

Moore (1903 – 1993) conducted research for her book on the New Market battleground, and the result is historical accuracy. But her book is a historical romance, and it's the writing that counts. When it was first published, The New York Times said that Moore "writes with poetic charm and beautiful abandon." The North American Review wrote that Rising Wind was "a poetically conceived and executed story." And The Saturday Review of Literature told its readers that Rising Wind was "written with a deft ability in the sympathetic penetration of an undisciplined girl's soul. It contains many passages of really beautiful prose."

July, 1924: The famous American writer, Sinclair Lewis, arrives in a remote Saskatchewan village as part of Canada's Treaty Party. Over the next three days he becomes a major player in a devious scheme to rob the Cree of their heritage. Based on true historical events. "This novel will delight readers seeking diversion but not whitewash the iniquities of Canada's past." - Publishers Weekly. "I loved the aching sense of Paradise-about-to-be lost. A novel for the ages but also very much a novel for today." - John Colbourn, drama critic. 9781550506709 • Paper, $21.95 CAD 249 pages • fiction

ISN'T THAT LEWIS CARROLL?

Where to Find the Most Mimsy Words and Frabjous Quotations of Lewis Carroll's Alice's Adventures in Wonderland, Through the Looking-Glass, and The Hunting of the Snark

by Charles A. Miller

The book contains illustrations by John Tenniel from the original Alice books. It lists nearly thirty of Carroll's poems, including "Jabberwocky," "The Walrus and the Carpenter," "You are old Father William," "'Twas Brilig and the Slithy Toves," and "The Mouse's Tale" (which is printed as "The Tail of a Mouse.") A reviewer in the San Jose News noted that "a chief advantage of the index is that its unique system enables the reader to use it with any edition of Carroll's books. It will delight the inveterate Carroll fan as it will intrigue the curious (and curiouser) ordinary reader like myself."

In 1962, Robin is forced by the Phillips Exeter Academy to undergo psychiatric treatment in order to be cured of his homosexuality. Instead of turning him into a heterosexual, his psychiatrist turns him into a schizophrenic. He has a beatific vision and gives a written account of it to the German theologian Paul Tillich, who then proclaims in Harvard's Memorial Church: The Son of Man is in our presence. Robin thereupon goes in search of the Second Coming and discovers Mark Frechette, who will later have the star role in Michelangelo Antonioni's film Zabriskie Point. Mark is crucified in prison in 1975 at the age of twenty-seven.
